Since its inception, AAT Bioquest has strived to innovate and push the boundaries of assay technology. More than a decade later, that commitment has stayed the same. Our unique, integrative approach to assay development draws from all fields of study, from chemistry to biology to informatics and more, leading to a wave of new generation photometric probes that utilize colorimetric, fluorimetric and luminescent technologies.

With our team of passionate scientists and experts, AAT Bioquest seeks to address some of the most challenging problems faced in life science research, diagnostic R&D and drug discovery. Employing a strong network of experienced and professional distributors across the globe, we provide superior products and customized services to a diverse portfolio of clients spanning from small research institutions to Fortune 500 companies.
